COMMUNITY CHURCH

Overview/Thought:

Current church models often promote consumer and spectator environments instead of relational and participatory environments. There is a call for the Church to recover God's original design of the way we do church.

Questions:

How do particular models of church promote being a consumer rather than a participant?

What does it mean to shift from spectator to being active in your gifts?

What kind of environments make you feel encouraged and connected to community?

What aspects of the early church should we see restored in our day?

Verses:

Acts 2:44 (NLT)

"And all the believers met together in one place and shared everything they had."

1 Thess 2:8 (NLT)

"We loved you so much that we shared with you not only God's Good News but our own lives, too."
