Thanksgiving to Thanks Living

It's hard to believe that the holiday season is upon us. Friends and family will gather in a few short weeks to celebrate Thanksgiving. Afterward, we will roll right into Advent and Christmas. Where does the time go? I love that these holidays can genuinely become Holy Days if we intentionally place Jesus at the center of all we do in our homes and church.

In November 1621, after the Pilgrims' first corn harvest proved successful, Pilgrim chronicler Edward Winslow wrote: "Our harvest being gotten in, our Governor sent four men on fowling, that so we might after a special manner rejoice together after we had gathered the fruits of our labors; they four in one day killed as much fowl, as with a little help beside, served the Company almost a week, at which time amongst other Recreations, we exercised our Arms, many of the Indians coming amongst us, and amongst the rest, their greatest king Massasoit, with some ninety men, whom for three days we entertained and feasted, and they went out and killed five Deer, which they brought to the Plantation and bestowed on our Governor, and upon the Captain and others. And although it be not always so plentiful, as it was at this time with us, yet by the goodness of God, we are so far from want, that we often wish you partakers of our plenty."

Did you catch that last line? "... yet by the goodness of God, we are so far from want, that we often wish you partakers of our plenty." Spiritually, this is the state our local church and many of our families have lived in for the past 29 months. We have so much to thank God for and equally as much to share with those around us. There is not a day that goes by that I don't find myself thanking God for all He is doing by the Holy Spirit in our families, homes, local church, and community. When approached from this mindset, giving thanks is so much more than a one-day feast of plenty. Instead, it becomes a lifestyle, the very nature by which we live and breathe. What I'm saying is Thanksgiving becomes thanks living!

This holiday season, let's place Jesus smack dab in the middle of our festivities. Let's be intentional in allowing these months to be Holy Days. Let's put faith right alongside our focus on family and friends in each and every gathering. And let's not stop just because the calendar changes from 2022 to 2023. Let's become a people who turn Thanksgiving into daily thanks living for the glory of God and the life of the world around us. We have so much to be thankful for!

The FAMILY FUN NIGHT will be Dec 11 at 6:00. Join us for the Christmas Choir Program and Dessert. If needed, the Snow Date is Dec 18.

TREASURY NOTES

By Nedra Moreau

October was a very good month for contributions received. The total for the month was $25,879, which is well above the monthly average needed for our budget. That brings our monthly average for the year to $19,500. This is partly due to some unusual gifts received during the month, but is really good news. Thank you so much!

You might be interested to know that there are 98 individuals or family units that have contributed this year, and most of those contribute regularly. I believe this is one more way that the Holy Spirit is moving in our congregation.

All of our bills and apportionments are paid to date, and we have a nice balance in our general fund. This will be a big help as we strive to do God's work in our community.

New Church Directory in the works

Louise Stanley and Jane Bensussen have been working on updating the Church Directory, and are ready to start the process. In December, we will be updating and printing a new directory for 2023. We have had many new folks attending our church and would like to include everyone who wishes to share their contact information. If you have changed any of your information recently or have attended and are not included in last year's directory, please fill out the form on the welcome table.

Please send the information to Jane Bensussen jbesuss@aol.com

Evan Hughes reviews October 23 baptism

After encountering multiple roadblocks to being baptized, I overwhelmingly felt a couple of weeks ago that the Lord was ready for it to happen. It was such a wonderful feeling when Ben responded to my text with a phone call where he eagerly told me that he would do it. However, when he asked me where we were going to do it, I did not have an answer for him.

As soon as Kendall suggested Jane and Gale Bensussen's pond though, I knew it was the place for it to happen, and I instantly reached out to ask Jane. While Ben responded in a matter of minutes, I had not even put my phone down yet when I received Jane's response telling me that their pond would be the perfect place. To say the least, I was feeling quite giddy that morning as I eagerly anticipated my baptism which was now only days away.

In no way do I recommend waiting 3 years after choosing to follow the Lord to be baptized, but I want all of you to know that this was without a doubt God's perfect timing. I am confident that God wanted the members of our beautiful church to be witnesses. I was amazed by how many of you came to support me or made sure to watch the video, words cannot fully express how much that means to me. The love which you displayed throughout the entire process was incredible.

I may have been the one getting dunked under the water, but I could not stop thinking about the wonderful people who were smiling at me from the shore. For those of you who were at the pond, I think our Heavenly Father was showing us the strength of our united community by sending a rain shower to get everyone a little wet. I have said it to many of you, and I will continue to tell you all just how much of a blessing it is to live and work alongside you.

With Love,
Evan

ABOUT THE GORGEOUS GIRLS

We had a great time at the Gorgeous Girls lunch this month. It was at Kobe Japanese Steakhouse. That's always a fun, entertaining time in itself, but then add 9 crazy ladies, and it was way too much fun! None were successful in catching the bites that the chef tossed! Helen surprised all of us with a little "thank you" for starting our group lunches - a glass that says "Hello Gorgeous".

Next month is the Monday after Thanksgiving, so we thought a salad place was in order. If you're free, come join us on the 4th Monday each month (except December) at 11:00 for lunch at a different place each time. Let Kathy Koehler know if you are interested or have any questions.

Trick or Treat in the Village of Locust Grove

Several hundred trickers worked their way through a dozen treaters on a misty evening in the Village of Locust Grove on Halloween Eve. Some walked, some rode in cars, some filled the bed of pickup trucks. All went home with an abundance of treats, most took advantage of free hot dogs prepared by Billy Cook, Marlin Gessling and Roger Walker.

Our Hot Dog Reminder Team

As the nation gears up for an election, this information was taken from an article by Stu Whitney, an investigative reporter for South Dakota News Watch.

A recent court ruling that found South Dakota violated federal voting registration laws has reignited the long-standing concern over Native American ballot access as the state braces for a 2022 gubernatorial election that could hinge on Indian Country precincts.

In a state with nearly 78,000 Indigenous residents, advocates of greater Native enfranchisement have worked to enlist new voters in areas such as the Pine Ridge and Rosebud reservations. “If we start voting, we’re going to be respected,” said Chase Iron Eyes of the Lakota People’s Law Project. “If we don’t vote, we don’t matter.”

It’s also a time of increased focus on voting rights and election security, partly influenced by former president Donald Trump’s refusal to concede the 2020 election despite no evidence of widespread electoral fraud. Heavily Democratic counties such as Oglala Lakota (home of the Pine Ridge reservation) and Todd (home to the Rosebud reservation) can loom large in close statewide elections and voting practices there have also been scrutinized by supporters of the Republican-dominated status quo.

Nationally, 34% of voting-age American Indians and Alaska Natives are not registered to vote, compared with 26.5% of non-Hispanic whites, according to the U.S. Census Bureau. Low turnout is also a concern: Oglala Lakota (41%) and Todd (55%) lagged well behind the statewide turnout of 74% for the 2020 general election.

Reasons for Indigenous non-participation in elections range from cultural and language barriers to socioeconomic realities and geographical challenges, such as long driving distances to the nearest polling site. For many reservation residents, the registration and voting process is complicated by not having a traditional street address, home mail delivery or broadband.

Barnett noted that there are several absentee voting satellite sites in reservation communities such as Eagle Butte, Wanblee and Mission, the result of legal battles between Native advocacy groups and past secretaries of state. Lawsuits have been filed accusing state officials of ignoring federal voting rights laws and in some cases pushing for more restrictive policies that disproportionately affect minority or low-income residents.

Governor Noem, who vowed to prioritize Native relations during her campaign for governor, alienated Indigenous leaders while in office by cracking down on potential Keystone XL pipeline protests, leading the Oglala Sioux Tribal Council to temporarily ban her from the Pine Ridge Reservation.

Relations worsened in the early stages of the COVID-19 pandemic, when the governor engaged in a legal standoff with tribal officials over their use of roadside checkpoints to try to control the spread of the corona virus on reservations.

“If you were on Pine Ridge at the time, you would have seen 1,000 people from traditional warrior societies arm themselves to the teeth and to go to every checkpoint to make sure that our territorial integrity was not violated,” said Iron Eyes.

The battleground has shifted in many respects to conflicts over the rights of Native residents to be counted, quite literally in the case of the 2020 census survey. The U.S. Census Bureau estimates that Native Americans living on reservations were undercounted by 5.6% nationally, continuing a trend from 2010, when the estimate was 4.9%. Census data helps determine formulas for funding distribution, legislative districts and policy decisions.

In May of 2022, a federal judge agreed with the Rosebud Sioux and Oglala Sioux tribes that South Dakota had violated portions of the National Voter Registration Act (NVRA), which was signed by President Bill Clinton in 1993 and took effect in 1995. The law requires state officials to provide voter registration information and guidance to eligible voters when they renew their driver’s license at the Department of Motor Vehicles or when receiving public assistance (such as food stamps or Medicaid) at the Department of Social Services and other state agencies.

In representing the tribes, the Native American Rights Fund produced data showing that the amount of voter registration applications processed through South Dakota public assistance agencies decreased by 57% from 2004 to 2018, from 7,000 applications down to 2,981. The lawsuit also accused Department of Public Safety officials of not properly transmitting voter registration forms to county auditors in some cases.

“It was not a priority, to say the least, and the extent to which it was not a priority suggests a level of voter suppression,” said Samantha Kelty, a Washington D.C.-based attorney with the Native American Rights Fund.

“South Dakota could very easily be a leader in championing Native American voting rights across the board, and that’s not happening,” Kelty said.

As part of the settlement reached in September 2022, Barnett said his office designated Suzanne Wetz as state NVRA coordinator to oversee the training and oversight process, which includes public reporting of voter registration data. The state has also changed the wording on driver’s license applications so that the form requires a person to opt out of the voter registration process, rather than require them to opt in.

Barnett said he has had to remind legislators during session that state laws running counter to federal provisions put the state at risk of lawsuits such as the one brought by the Oglala and Rosebud tribes. Lyman County was ordered by a federal judge in August of 2022 to work with the Lower Brule Sioux Tribe to change the county commission election process, which used an at-large system that denied representation by diluting the vote of the county’s 38% Native population.

“Our goal is to provide reasonable access and make it hard to cheat, but it’s tough to please everybody. It would be nice to take the politics out of it.”

That’s hard to do when the Native American vote has been instrumental in races such as Democrat Tim Johnson’s U.S. Senate win over then-Congressman John Thune in 2002, the result of registration drives and get-out-the-vote efforts in reservation counties.

Supporters of greater ballot access insist that giving all citizens an opportunity to engage in the democratic process is not a partisan endeavor.

“We don’t care how Native Americans vote, we just want them to be able to vote, and we work across the country to make that happen,” said Kelty. “Native Americans are not a monolith. Every tribe is different, and every individual is different.”

Tuesday Lunch learns about Worldwide Mobility program

Gary Moreau, Executive Director of Worldwide Mobility MO-Columbia, told the story of this gift of mobility, dignity and opportunity, which had its beginnings here in Columbia to the group attending the October Tuesday Lunch..

The Mobility Cart is a sturdy, three-wheeled vehicle propelled by hand-crank or pull handle which can be operated by a man, woman or child who is mobility impaired. More than 90,000 of these carts have been distributed in more than 100 countries since the organization began in 1994 here in Columbia. Over 29,000 of those carts came from the Columbia shop. Each cart is provided to the disabled at no cost to the individual.

Columbia Methodist Minister Mel West conceived the idea in response to the tragic loss of mobility in Zaire due to land mines and polio. A production shop was opened in Columbia in 2,000, and in 2020 the Mel and Barbara West Cart Center opened in their first owned and paid for building.

Watch for our Christmas Store

Fall has arrived at Twice Blessed. We have been busy getting the Spring/Summer clothes packed away for next year and getting the Fall/Winter items on the shelves. The number of people served by the Twice Blessed mission increased over 100% in the last month. We truly appreciate all your donations so we could keep our shelves stocked.

Twice Blessed will be sponsoring the 2nd annual Christmas Store on Saturday, December 3rd from 10am-2pm. We have already heard that Santa will be making appearance sometime that day! There will be a sign up sheet closer to time asking for volunteer "elves". We would greatly appreciate help for store set up on Friday evening, working at tables and the gift wrapping station and cleanup on Saturday. More information to come.

Thank you,
Glenna and Jill

A huge thank you to Marsha Coleman and Larry and Susie Henneke for the wonderful donation of mums for Twice Blessed. They were beautiful lining our walk way and our customers were so appreciative of getting to take one with them.

Kudos

My 6th grade granddaughter, Ellie Lichte, is a cross country runner and a pretty amazing runner, if I do say so! She competed in the State Middle School Cross Country meet in Hermitage last weekend, and placed 4th in the state! Lexington Middle School girls team took 2nd! Katie is the daughter of Michael & Katie (Koehler) Lichte of Lexington.

Her brother, Chapel, is also an outstanding Freshman cross country runner. The State High School competition is in November.

Natural Beauty is a Gift from God

While waiting to photograph the Trick or Treat event I was visiting with Jim Johnson. He glanced at the sky behind me with a look of awe on his face, so I turned and looked, and managed to capture this image with my camera. I knew I was on God's ground. Nature is one of His best gifts to us all. I looked into this a bit more and found this quote on the Internet. It saved me the struggle of trying to express myself.

"The Bible is full of verses about the beauty of nature. In Genesis, we are told that God created the world and saw that it was good. Psalm 19 calls the heavens and earth the 'handiwork of God's fingers.' Isaiah 40 describes the beauty of the Created world as a 'gracious gift' from God. The Book of Revelation tells us that one day nature will be restored to its original perfection, free from the effects of sin. In the meantime, we are called to enjoy and care for the natural world, using it wisely as stewards of God's creation. These Bible verses about nature remind us that we are part of something much larger than ourselves and that this world is a precious gift from God."
