

Jason and Nikki Albelo (Al-bel-low) have served as ministers in the Foursquare Church organization for more than 25 years, including 12 years as the Lead Pastors of East Hill Church in Gresham, Oregon. Then, in late 2019, they sensed the call of God to step away from East Hill into another level of leadership development—one that influenced more pastors, and on a global scale. Well, being the “way-maker, miracle worker, promisekeeper” that God is. . .

Since 2020, Jason and Nikki have been serving as regional coordinators for Foursquare Missions International to the 15 nations of Southern Africa and Emissaries. Jason also serves as the International Training Lead for Foursquare Disaster Relief. The couple lives half of the year in Cape Town, South Africa, and the other six months in Gresham, Oregon.

In addition to the Foursquare mission, Nikki, with a master’s in social work from Portland State University, also works as a Licensed Clinical Social Worker for Connected Space Counseling in Gresham. Jason has a master’s in biblical theological studies from Western Seminary. Before ministry, he was a Captain in the United States Marine Corps—Ooh-Rah! Part Puerto Rican, he used to preach in Spanish, but says nowadays his skill is conversational. Married for 30+ years, Jason and Nikki have two children: Ashely, 26, and Jarrett, 23.

With a focus on leadership training, church multiplication, and international church development, Jason and Nikki are inspired daily in their mission objective to equip and empower local pastors and leaders in Southern Africa and around the world to be part of the Great Commission.
