

OCTOBER TESTIMONIES

- Out Chinook Salmon fishing in Rogue River at Gold Beach with complete strangers & excellent guides. One gentleman starts talk about old Toyota truck he loved. Ahh! I said was it a 22 RE? "Yes!" Want to hear how GOD answered my prayer? "YES," they said. I told them that I asked the Lord for a 4 cylinder, stick shift Toyota truck for better gas mileage. Then asked that it have seats in back. Then Lord, I really would like it to be RED & under 100,000 miles & under 4K. Lo-and-behold within 2 weeks I was driving by my mechanic in West Salem & they had MY 22 RE Toyota truck with ALL the above. They thought that was pretty cool. Nominal Christians IF at all. GO GOD! -Denise Kean
- Our niece's husband has been looking for a new job because he has always wanted to be a husband and dad before anything else and his current job is not allowing him to have family time. He's been applying at different places and the last one he applied at he really wants. He loved the atmosphere and the way the company was structured for work/life balance. He passed the first-round interview, then there was a timed test where they sent him scenarios and he had to answer what he would do in that situation. After he did that, he told his wife that he felt like he bombed it and wasn't going to get pushed to the next round of interviews. So, my husband and I have been praying for that situation, that he could have the desire of his heart to have family time and a job with a healthy atmosphere. They also just had a baby boy a month ago and when they were getting ready to do his circumcision at the hospital the doctors said there was something wrong with his penis. They referred him to a specialist because they thought he would need reconstructive surgery. We have been praying for the baby that he would not need surgery, and nothing would be wrong with him. Yesterday our niece texted me and said that her husband got pushed through to the next round of interviews and they went to the specialist that day too and the baby does not need surgery at all! (Update...He got the job!) -Sandy
- We've been waiting for a gap in our son's teeth to close to get his braces off. It's been stubborn and the orthodontist talked about putting a permanent retainer bar in his mouth. I just didn't feel good about it in my spirit. I suddenly remembered a picture I had in the night recently. That I had seen the gap in his teeth closed. So, I just prayed and declared that the gap in his teeth needed to close overnight. The next morning the gap in his teeth was gone!

Secondly, today my daughter was limping around the house. There was no injury in her foot externally, but I had remembered a dream I had quite a while ago. It was about a hurricane in Florida. This dream had been in the forefront of my mind a lot lately because of the hurricanes in Florida and especially because my friend Katie that many of you know now lives there. In the dream while the hurricane happened my daughter's foot was injured by a piece of glass. Remembering this dream, I got a wild idea to just prophetically pull out this piece of glass from the dream and then pray healing over the wound. I believe it was a picture of a spirit realm wound. After prayer she was totally better and very shocked how fast she was healed. Praise God! - Felicia

- I wanted to share an encounter I had with the Lord recently, because I think it may unlock a level of the awe of the Lord we haven't thought about in a while, or if ever. One day I asked how the Lord was. I truly think it was him prompting me to ask. I then saw a picture of him. He said, "I'm great!" In that same moment I knew that he experiences horrific things every day. He sees his kids sad and crying out to him every day. He feels sorrow and has a full range of emotions. He sees his children that he loves with entire heart, rebelling and missing out on what God has for them. Yet, God was feeling great! He was full of energy and love when I saw him. I then saw him bend down to hug the one with joy and energy. It just totally wowed me. There truly is no one like the Lord. No one can operate that way but our God.
