The Estate Sale

Recently, Karynn and I went to an estate sale in our neighborhood. Ever been to one? Chaotic, loosely arranged, with the treasures and trash of a bygone time.

One of the first things I noticed on the table were the military caps. I'm talking "high falutin", "scrambled eggs" on the visor caps. "I think he was a colonel," advised one lady. I found several of his uniforms in a closet in another room - and his books. He was well-read. Even had a copy of The Banner (if you're old enough to remember that), reporting the death of Douglas MacArthur (if you're old enough to remember him).

Another room: Clothes, cowboy boots, all in disarray. The kitchen: Dishware, of course. I had to ask someone what the gizmo on the table was - an industrial type of juicer. On to the garage.

Usual tools. More books. What intrigued me were the little boxes of "stuff" - the kind of "stuff" you keep because you "might need it sometime." A tiny bottle. Some wire. Other whizbangs.

I left feeling weird. All the stuff I have! One day I'll leave it, like the Colonel did. I had the urge to go clean out a lot of junk, but the day was pretty, and the urge soon passed.

But I won't forget that life is fleeting. The writer of Ecclesiastes, enumerating his accomplishments declared, "All of it is meaningless, a chasing after the wind."

I'm not against having things in our abundant country. Solomon wasn't either. He declared that "A person can do nothing better than to eat and drink and find satisfaction in their own toil. This too, I see, is from the hand of God, for without him, who can eat or find enjoyment?" (Ecc. 2:24-25) After all, God gives us "all good things to enjoy," along with His reminder to be rich in good deeds.

But the final breath comes, and we go home. What counts at that moment - and if we are wise, we remember it before - are the ones we've loved, the memories we've made, and the Savior who accepts us.

I won't forget the Colonel. Hints in his library led me to believe that he was a Christian. You taught me some things, sir.

Now, excuse me - there are a few screws, washers and some copper wire that I need to put away. Might need them sometime.
