Good morning Northside friends. Greetings from First Baptist Edinburg. I am so thankful to your Student Pastor for giving me the opportunity to come to Northside and lead during RAD Weekend.

“If we are going to say we love God, then we need to love his people.”

This morning we are wrapping up with the final session of RAD Weekend with a challenge. We will be in Matthew 25 and asking the question, “What will be your legacy when you leave this earth?” I know this may seem odd but we are called with a certain purpose. This weekend, we opened up with defining what God’s calling is in our life. We encouraged students that their purpose was to be missionaries in their own circles. Then we gave them some applications on Saturday evening and this morning we closed it out with a challenge to live out the calling God has for them.

This morning, I want to leave you with the question of, “What will God say when we meet Him?” Because if we read on in Matthew 25 about the final judgment, Jesus asks his disciples and onlookers, “What did you do with who I put in front of you? Did you feed him or give him something to drink? Did you clothe him? Did you go and visit?”

If we are going to say we love God, then we need to love his people. This means that we need to take the gospel to everyone. But it begins right here in your own neighborhood, at your work, with friends, with classmates.

When it comes down to it, what will Jesus say?
