THOUGHTS ON THE JOURNEY

As a child, I remember people referring to Consumer Reports prior to making any major purchase. Today, if we wish, we can short cut this process by simply looking at online reviews. However when we do it, I doubt we make any major financial commitment without first checking out the product. It is of great value to know what others have observed and what their experience has been.

Our lives are not much different. If we claim to be a Christian, people around us are observing us. They are looking at our lives to see how we live. They are asking questions like, how is this person different from me? What difference has the Lord made in their life? Are they better than me? Are they judging me? The list could go on and on, but rest assured, we are being evaluated.

Even though I understand all of this and should live carefully, it is not the greatest question I should be concerned about. The real question is, how is my life measuring up as it relates to the call of God? Am I living as He has called me to? Am I bearing fruit that is in keeping with repentance (Matt. 3:8)? Am I bringing glory to my Heavenly Father? Am I being the salt and light that God has called me to be? These are questions that deserve our honest evaluation.

In today’s passage, we will see a call to abide. By abiding, we are able to keep the things above in order as they should be. Our text today will offer us three ideas for continuing to abide and honor God: we must spend time in the word, we must spend time in prayer, and we must be obedient.

Know that I am a fellow traveler as we seek to be all God has called us to be.

Honored to be your pastor,
