THOUGHTS ON THE JOURNEY

It is a challenging thing to know how we are to conduct ourselves in a world that is seemingly so far from God. In one sense, we have a dual citizenship. We live and operate in this world, but we know that our true citizenship is in heaven. In fact, Peter reminds us that we are exiles here. He says in 1 Peter 2:11, “I urge you as sojourners and exiles to abstain from the passions of the flesh, which wage war against your soul.” So, how do we live in this world but live as exiles at the same time?

Our text today gives us several ideas that we can develop. First, we must accept that we are here for the long haul. We will (Lord willing) have a good and long life on this earth. Thus, we must learn what it means to live and operate in this world. One of the things we can do is to get about living. While we must be careful of the trappings of this world, we cannot avoid the world as a whole.

Second, we are told to “seek the welfare of the city” (Jer. 29:7). We must seek to do all that we can do to make this world a better place. I think this challenge extends to morality, the economy, our relationships with others, our education system, and more. We, as believers, are to make a difference in the world in which we live.

Third, we must pray. Too often, we look at prayer as a secondary activity. We treat prayer as if it is a side dish on an already full plate. Prayer is not a thing, prayer is the thing. We must be committed to praying for our community, our leaders, and those in places of influence. Prayer should be a characteristic of every believer’s life.

As we look ahead, let us realize that we have been placed here for a specific time and a specific purpose. Let us be busy about fulfilling God’s plan for our lives.

Honored to be your pastor,
