Merry Christmas Northside Family and Friends!

Just five more days until Christmas. Jett, our youngest, reminded me today by walking by with a huge grin on his face saying, “five more days,” and holding up four fingers. I love seeing Christmas through his eyes. He loves all the lights and things Christmas brings. Coraleigh, our next youngest, gets a little more what Christmas is truly about, but you can see from time to time she misses why we celebrate. My oldest two, Joshua and Abigail, get it. They started helping with one of our family traditions a few years ago, and they try to use scripture to point the younger two to the real meaning of Christmas. This has also been echoed in our new neighborhood. We have been driving around our new neighborhood and checking out all the lights. Some of these folks have a full on light show, and others have a grinch with a pile of half working lights at his feet. We talked about having a simple but powerful Nativity scene and this led to a conversation about how we must live out everyday what the celebration of Jesus’ birth is all about. We will have to love our neighbors well, care for them when they are sick, be willing to stop our busyness and be intentional to spend time with them. We will have to reflect Jesus in everything we do. This is a heavy and hard thing to do, but a task we should all be willing to do.

It is easy to get caught up in commercial Christmas and lose the true meaning of Christmas. It is also just as easy to celebrate the season and not live it out everyday. As believers, we need to celebrate Christmas and Easter everyday in how we live out our lives. I want to encourage us to live where our feet are in this season, but also celebrate a week from now when we are moving into a New Year, and maybe not a new us. This will make more sense December 31st. We need to celebrate Christmas during this season and the next.

We love serving alongside of you all, and seeing God working through our journeys. Keep it up, keep pushing and loving others as we journey together.
