THE CASE FOR Reformed Worship

Celebrating the 500th Anniversary of the first defense of Reformation's liturgical reforms, Martin Bucer's Grund und Ursach, Ground and Reason.

Does it matter what the church does when it gathers for congregational worship? Given that the available amount of time is finite, what should occupy that time? What should be emphasized? Preaching? Praying? Singing? The sacraments? Are there a fixed number of biblically sanctioned activities, or what has historically been called elements? Or is the church free to innovate? What should we make of liturgical drama and dance? What about pyrotechnics and light shows?

These are the kinds of questions that the church has asked throughout the centuries to which our day has added some 21st century distinctives. Reformed Protestantism has provided biblically based answers addressing the whole range of issues, particularly important today given the prevailing liturgical chaos. This conference will explore these answers.
