STONEHILL STORY

I was baptized Catholic as a child, but religion was not a priority in our family. As a young adult, my youngest sister introduced me to a nondenominational church in Redondo Beach, California, where I found a loving community and learned to lean into my faith—especially during the loss of my youngest brother to mental illness.

Three years ago, we moved to the Treasure Valley to be closer to family. Feeling isolated and searching for community, I eventually found Stonehill. I was drawn to its “real messy” acceptance and relatable services. Through volunteering, women’s groups, and worship, I found true friendship, sisterhood, and a deeper relationship with Christ.

As my faith grew, I felt called to intentionally surrender my life to Him. I signed up for a river baptism in 2025, expecting it to be simple, but it turned out to be deeply meaningful. With dear friends praying beside me, I walked out of the river with a sense of peace and renewal.

I know I will always be a “real messy” person, but I believe, without a doubt, that Christ died for my sins, and I am committed to living intentionally and faithfully by His Word.

STONEHILL STORY

At our Christmas store, we witnessed a beautiful moment in our store. One mom came in with a set budget for her kids, but after seeing how affordable everything was, she ended up well under budget. Instead of keeping the extra money, she chose to donate it to help other families shopping that day.

Her generosity helped cover items for a single dad who is currently out of work, as well as two other moms who needed help lowering their total. Each family was overjoyed and deeply grateful.

Moments like this remind us that this store is about more than affordable items—it's about following Jesus' call to love one another, building community, and meeting needs with compassion.
