8 Horrific Fires & Black Smoke...Josephus

- Book 6, Chapter 4, Sections 5–7 (Temple-Fire) 7And besides, one of those that went into the place prevented Cæsar, when he ran so hastily out to restrain the soldiers: and threw the fire upon the hinges of the gate, in the dark. Whereby the flame burst out from within the holy house itself immediately:
- Book 6, Chapter 5, Section 1While the holy house was on fire, every thing was plundered that came to hand; and ten thousand of those that were caught were slain. Nor was there a commiseration of any age, or any reverence of gravity; but children, and old men, and profane persons, and priests, were all slain in the same manner... Yet was the misery it self more terrible than this disorder. For one would have thought that the hill it self, on which the temple stood, was seething hot (Vapors-Steam of Blood); as full of fire on every part of it. The flame was also carried a long way, and made an echo, together with the groans of those that were slain. And because this hill was high, and the works at the temple were very great, one would have thought the whole city had been on fire. Nor can one imagine any thing either greater, or more terrible than this noise 2. And now the Romans, judging that it was in vain to spare what was round about the holy house, burnt all those places; as also the remains of the cloisters, and the gates: two excepted: the one on the east side, and the other on the south. Both which however they burnt afterward.
- 6:4:6"But as for the legions... they were in such a disorder themselves, that they could not hear [Titus's commands]; for their ears were deafened by the great noise... and the dust and smoke did so fill their eyes, that they could not see..."
